Oido. A non-island accessible via public transportation

Oido Island is technically not an island, having only three sides surrounded by water but was called an island since the Joseon period. The boardwalk is a great place to take a walk, feel the salty breezes coming off the ocean and see the beautiful glowing sunset. The most popular stops on the boardwalk are the Red Lighthouse and the beautiful Tree of Life Observatory Deck. Local specialties consist of sliced raw fish, clamshell noodle soup and grilled clam sand there are quite a few restaurants along the boardwalk that are ready to fill those bellies when you visit. Be prepared as this is a 'touristy' area which means there are locals that stand outside of each restaurant hollering to get your attention to welcome you in. The restaurants all serve basically the same dishes, so stop into whichever one sparks your fancy.
